1 Potential Grade Separations Identified for Study at the Next Level of

2 Environmental Documentation

- 3 Grade separations would ultimately be required for some of the existing and proposed
- 4 crossings along the length of the Chicago to St. Louis Build Alternatives. This section
- 5 describes how the crossings most likely to require grade separations were identified and
- 6 reports which crossings are recommended to be included for more detail study at the
- 7 next level of environmental documentation. The purpose for this analysis at the Tier 1
- 8 level is to identify the potential costs and impacts that would be associated with these
- 9 grade separations.

10 Methodology

- 11 The first stage of this process was to determine exposure factors for three different area
- types; rural, urban populations between 5,000 and 200,000, and urban populations over
- 13 200,000. The exposure factors were calculated as the product of roadway average daily
- 14 traffic (ADT) and train volumes for existing railroad to roadway grade separated
- 15 crossings in the State of Illinois. Since interstate highways and other freeways are fully
- 16 grade separated regardless of exposure factor, these crossings were left out of the data
- 17 set. Once the relevant crossing data was obtained from IDOT, it was sorted to look at
- only the crossings for which both train traffic and vehicular traffic from the Illinois
- 19 Commerce Commission (ICC) and the FRA databases were available. This process
- 20 resulted in approximately 30 percent of the original data set to utilize as a basis for
- 21 comparison. The results provided an average exposure factor for each of the three area
- 22 types described previously. Doing so makes the data more comparable; for example, it
- 23 would not be pertinent to compare a crossing located in a rural area to one in a densely
- 24 populated urban area.
- 25 The desired results were to calculate an existing exposure factor by multiplying the
- 26 given ADT by the train traffic at the individual crossing. The average exposure factors
- of the three area types were:
- 28 Urban over 200,000 = 1,445,011;
- 29 Urban 5,000 to 200,000 = 150,379; and
- 30 Rural less than 5,000 = 53,267.

31 Results

- 32 In order to identify existing at grade crossings to be studied at the next level of
- 33 environmental documentation for potential grade separation, only the non-interstate
- 34 collectors and higher were analyzed. The numbers of railroad to roadway crossings that
- 35 meet these criteria are 71 collectors and 67 arterials. In order to get an exposure factor
- 36 for these crossings, the 2010 ADT was projected out to 2030 ADT using a 2 percent
- 37 growth per year. The projected train traffic used was:
- 38 Section 1 Chicago 26 trains/day;
- 39 Section 2 Chicago 104 trains/day;

- 1 Section 3 Joliet to Springfield 45 trains/day;
- 2 Section 4 Springfield 45 trains/day;
- 3 Section 5 Springfield 72 trains/day;
- 4 Section 6 Springfield to Alton 45 trains/day; and
- 5 Section 7 Alton to St. Louis 45 trains/day.
- 6 Using these criteria, exposure factors were created for the 138 crossings. The results
- 7 were then compared to the average existing exposure factors for the appropriate
- 8 population group to determine grade crossings to be considered in at the next level of
- 9 environmental documentation for grade separation. Appendix D shows the crossings
- 10 that, based on this procedure, should be considered for further analysis of a potential
- 11 grade separation.

Conclusion

12

- 13 Although there are 101 crossings for a potential grade separation, it would not be
- reasonable to assume that all of these crossings would be studied at the next level of
- 15 environmental documentation for a grade separation for several reasons. Local
- 16 jurisdictions may be opposed to the impacts of a grade separation and others may not be
- 17 justified when a life cycle cost analysis is completed. Therefore, for the purposes of the
- 18 cost estimate, it was assumed that approximately 1/4 of the crossings would be built.
- 19 The cost estimate includes 25 new grade separations from Chicago to St. Louis.
- 20 Though it is not anticipated that all of the potential grade separations listed would be
- 21 constructed in the future, the locations of the potential grade separations are listed
- 22 below to provide the best available information at this time. This information provides a
- 23 better overall understanding of the types of crossings that would likely warrant grade
- separations, and therefore what the long-term components of the project might include.
- 25 In addition, presenting the potential locations of the grade separations early in the
- 26 planning process gives local planners and officials, as well as members of the public, an
- 27 opportunity to review the information and provide input on the locations listed, and/or
- 28 not listed. This input can then be considered in subsequent phases of the planning
- 29 process as the project progresses and more specific design plans are developed should
- one of the Build Alternatives be selected for further study based on the results of the Tier
- 31 1 level analyses presented in this Tier 1 DEIS.
