

Jim Fox, SEPTA

With 22 years of experience in the mass transit industry, Jim Fox is the current Director of System Safety and Risk Management at the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority (SEPTA). Jim graduated from Temple University with a BS degree in Civil/Construction Engineering. Upon graduating Jim worked for Turner Construction Company as a project manager. After a short tenure with Turner, Jim was hired by SEPTA in 1991. During his first 9 years at SEPTA Jim worked in the Capital Engineering & Construction Division managing major capital improvement projects. In 1998, Jim secured a position in the System Safety Department and in 2001 was appointed the position of Director. In 2009, Jim was given the added responsibility of overseeing SEPTA's Enterprise Risk Management department. Jim also, participates on numerous internal and external working groups and committees in the interest of advancing the Safety, and Sustainability of the Public Mass Transportation Industry.